

Discourse in ESOL research
and design:
the basic units

Fernando Francisco Castaños

Ph.D. in Education
Institute of Education

1996

If you believe, as I do, that the basic unit of human linguistic communication is the illocutionary act, then the most important form of the original question will be, 'How many categories of illocutionary acts are there?'

John R. Searle, 1976

Contents
Abstract	2
Preface	6
PART I
Chapter 1 INADEQUATE CATEGORIES	10
Chapter 2 PROBLEMS IN CLASSROOM DISCOURSE RESEARCH	25
Chapter 3 THE STUDY OF DISSERTATION ACTS IN THE CONTEXT OF ACADEMIC LANGUAGE RESEARCH	40
PART II
Chapter 4 THE BASIC CATEGORIES OF DISCOURSE	66
Chapter 5 IDENTITY CRITERIA: THE STRAWSON-SEARLE APPROACH	85
Chapter 6 THE POINT OF DISSERTATION: AUSTIN'S APPROACH	97
Chapter 7 ACTS AND RELATIONS: WIDDOWSON'S APPROACH	112

PART III

Chapter 8 ILLOCUTION REVISITED	140
-----------------------------------	-----

Chapter 9 DISSERTATION	165
---------------------------	-----

Chapter 10 IMPLICATIONS AND APPLICATIONS	190
---	-----

Tables and Illustrations

Table 1 Analytical representation of situations	93
--	----

Table 2 Sentences involved in situations analysed	93
--	----

Table 3 Units and sorts of unity	120
-------------------------------------	-----

Table 4 The basic categories of discourse analysis	134
---	-----

Figure 1 Trappes-Lomax's links	127
-----------------------------------	-----

Figure 2 Alternative representation of links	128
---	-----

Figure 3 Edmondson's diagram	157
---------------------------------	-----